Ben Wade, ex - Morehead Star Doing Right Well With Cubs

Ben Wade, outstanding high-school and minor league star, is showing up well with the Chicago Cubs Training Camp in Los Angeles, according to reports.

Last year Ben hit .426 in 154 games with the Nashville club, won 11 or 12 games in a row when he pitched, and was the winning pitcher of the all-star game.

Fans in this region will remember Ben as a very good all-around ball player with a fast ball that was hard to get hold of. In one game at New Bern, he struck out 11 batters in a row.

On the west coast he will get a chance to see brother Jake, big leaguer for 10 years, now with the San Diego Seals. There's a difference between the two. Jake is a curveball southpaw while Ben is a fire-ball right-hander.

But they're both the same in that they're both hard to hit.

As to his long ball hitting, ask Wes Taylor, ex-Beaufort high school pitcher. Wes served him up a home run ball in a close game between Beaufort and Morehead years back, and Ben promptly knocked it in to the creek, way way back.
