WANTA SKATE: Last week when the temperature was hovering around 85 in the Capital City, scores of Raleigh residents went ice skating. The W. N. Reynolds Coliseum at State College has no basketball games to attract crowds now, and the spacious basketball courts, with floors removed and packed away for the summer, have been turned into a block long solid block of ice for skaters who know how it is done. Right now the fun is mostly confined to damyankees once removed, but Raleigh folks are interested, have bought up all ice skates, which two or three stores here hurriedly ordered, and roller skating may soon take a back seat in Raleigh.

With attractions planned for the year round, the Coliseum may soon be if it isn't already the biggest promotional business in North Carolina. Ice skating in
