

Stillway Sparkles Infield Play In Morehead Tidewater Tilts

Sparks Infield

Take a close play in Morehead City Tidewater League game, and clear away the diamond dust and two to one you're apt to find Stillway underneath. Safe. For this speedy badplayer who handles the hot corner for Morehead City, gives it all he's got. And he's got it.

Now playing his third season in Tidewater ball, the colorful Stillway, who would rather play short than third, has been playing baseball ever since he was knee high to a bat boy.

It was in the Flatbush section deep in the heart of Brooklyn where he learned that belly slide and the art of beating out an infield hit. Some time has passed since then, but at 35 he can still steal a mean sack, and take his cut with the best of them. He batted about .320 in last year's league
