

Ted Williams, Now in Marine Corps, Joins Area's List of House-Hunters

Ted Williams

Ted Williams, recently retired from baseball and now stationed at Cherry Point in the Marine Corps, is house hunting. He, his wife and four-year-old daughter, Bobbie Jo, are reported to be interested in a home in Morehead City, with Cherry Point and New Bern as second and third choices.

Williams, who will serve as a captain in the corps for the next few months, doesn't much care where he lives in his off hours, just so it's near a good place to fish. He doesn't even care what kind of fishing.

Ted, who was formerly with the Boston Red Sox, visited in New Bern Friday. Until he fractured his elbow in the 1950 All-Star game in Chicago he was regarded as baseball's greatest hitter of the last decade. He had a lifetime average to prove it, having hit .350 until 1950.

Had Ted not seen three years of service as a flying instructor during the second world war, there is no telling how many records he might have established. He led the American league in hitting four times. His .406 mark of 1941 is the highest in the American league in the last 30 years. Four times he led the league in home runs and in runs batted in.

Joe Dimaggio recently said, "Williams is the greatest hitter I ever saw." Ted used a 34-ounce bat 35 inches long.

If Ted wants cooling breezes from the ocean plus some of the best fishing along the Atlantic coast, he has no choice but to settle in some spot in Carteret county.

After six scoreless innings, Campanella of the Dodgers reached first on a walk and eventually scored on a single by Carl Furillo.

The Dodger score in the ninth was made by Jackie Robinson who walked to first and advanced to third on a wild pitch and an infield out. He came home on a double by Gil Hodges.

The Dodger victory was No. 5 for pitcher Ben Wade. The game was Brooklyn's 20th without a loss against Cincinnati, Boston and Pittsburgh.
